

THREE FIRES CAUSE OVER MILLION LOSS

Chicago Grain Elevator
Destroyed as 300 Firemen Fight Flames

TOLEDO ALSO SCENE

Sub-Zero Temperatures
Hinder Firemen

By International News Service
Three fires, swept by winds and with temperatures below zero, were reported in three parts of the country today with loss expected to surpass the million and a half mark.

The greatest was in Chicago where a grain elevator was destroyed. A historic Toledo, O., theatre building was burned at a loss of more than $150,000 and St. Eulalia's Catholic church in Boston was razed.

300 Fire Fighters
At Elevator Blaze
CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Three hundred firemen, working through the night in a seven degree below zero temperature, today brought under control a $1,000,000 fire which completely destroyed a seven story elevator of the Rosenbaum Grain Corp. on Goose Island.

The flames destroyed 1,630,000 bushels of grain stored in the huge structure. Company officials estimated the loss to be at least $1,000,000.

Fighting heroically in the sub-zero cold, the firemen were successful in preventing the flames from destroying other industrial structures on the island. The wind carried blazing embers across the Chicago river to the roofs of apartment houses and industrial plants, igniting the roofs of two other buildings. Eighty pieces of fire apparatus were summoned.

Water from the fire hose fell across the sides of the blazing elevator in sheets of ice. Three firemen suffered from frozen feet and frostbite, and an emergency relief station was established to shelter those who were overcome by the cold.

P. D. Armour built the elevator in 1898 during his historic struggle in the wheat pits with Joseph Leiter, later selling the structure to the Rosenbaum corporation. The packer's freight in building that and several other elevators was responsible for his $10,000,000 victory over Leiter.

Sacred Vessels
Lost in Church
BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Twenty firemen were overcome and 40 families were driven from their homes in a freezing temperature today when fire destroyed St. Eulalia's Catholic church and menaced nearby structures. Loss was estimated at $100,000.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, occurred on the sixteenth anniversary of another fire which virtually destroyed the edifice.

Rev. Patrick J. Waters, former professor of history at St. John's University, Brighton, pastor, his three assistants together with police and firemen made valiant attempts to save sacred vessels and vestments but were turned back by the flames.

CO-ED JAILED AS KIDNAPER

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—Mystery surrounding the strange kidnapping case of Mrs. Mary B. Skeele, 45, wife of Dr. Walter Skeele, dean of the college of music at the University of Southern California, was cleared today according to police.

Detectives announced that pretty Miss Luella Pearl Hammer, 28, a former co-ed at the music college at the University, and W. P. Howard, 31, of Kansas City, Mo., an ex-convict from San Quentin, had confessed.

Mrs. Skeele was abducted from her home by a faked telephone message and held captive 24 hours for $10,000 ransom until the kidnappers considered her "dangerous" and returned her unharmed.

A typewriter on which the ransom notes were written was found, police said, in Miss Hammer's Pasadena bungalow a few miles from the Skeele home.

Miss Hammer, now a music teacher, and Howard, who said he had been employed by Miss Hammer as her "handy man," were booked on suspicion of kidnapping pending a grand jury investigation.

Ultra-Violet Ray Value Told To Rotarians Here

What ultra-violet rays mean to health was interestingly explained Thursday when Hewitt Warburton, Cleveland, spoke before the Rotary Club on Sunshine and Health. "We have good health a person should have proper diet, exercise and sound sleep with plenty of good sunshine," he said.

He explained the different rays from the sun and asserted that the ultra-violet rays are those which create the Vitamin "D" so essential to health.

"Light travels in waves," Mr. Warburton continued, "and in these waves different rays are created such as the infra-red rays, the

2 MEN, WOMAN FACE CHARGES OF EXTORTION

Government to Prosecute as Roanoke Youths Are Caught With Check

WIFE OF ONE HELD

Demand $50,000 From Aviator and Wife

ROANOKE, Va., Feb. 10.—Federal authorities today were considering the placing of charges against two men and a woman, under arrest for attempting to extort $50,000 from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh by threatening to abduct his second son, Jon Morrow Lindbergh. They are Jod Bryant, 19; Norman Harvey, 26, and the latter's wife, Ethel.

No charges have been placed against the woman, but police announced this morning that she was conversant with the plot to extort the money from the renowned flier and his wife.

Department of justice men arrived during the night and after a conference of several hours declared the trio should be held to face charges by the federal government. They indicated charges might be lodged against the trio during the day, but so far have made no specific accusations.

ALL QUESTIONED

None of the trio has been asked for a confession, so far, the police say, but have been questioned in regard to certain details of the alleged plot.

The three were taken into custody late yesterday, shortly after Bryant had attempted to cash a check for $17,000 which to cash a check had been hidden in a hollow stump by Lindbergh's representatives. It had been planted by police.

Those under arrest are ignorant mountaineers, police said, and the two published letters directed to Lindbergh, exhibit little thought for execution.

The letters were published less than 12 months from the night the first Lindbergh baby was stolen from its parents' Soudland, N. J., home.

Both men deny any knowledge of the letters, but they have been identified by Detective Chief E. C. Johnson. Johnson reported he met the men when he represented himself as an emissary for the New Jersey couple.

CONFERRED WITH MEN

Johnson said he conferred with the men in a Roanoke hotel, and after conferences succeeded in having them release their ransom demand from $50,000 to $25,000, and finally to $17,000. This latter sum, he said, represented by a check was hidden in a hollow stump on the outskirts of Roanoke.

Bryant was arrested after he left the cashier's window of a Roanoke bank where he went to have the check cashed. The check bore a code mark "22-XXXX," which Johnson said he had demanded.

The cashier gave Bryant blank paper, instead of the currency. He left the bank and a short distance away met Harvey. When (Continued on Page Two)

18 MUTINEERS KILLED TODAY

Dutch Military Plane Scores Direct Hit; Other Men Under Guard.

BATAVIA, Java, Feb. 10.—Carrying the bodies of eighteen mutineers killed when Dutch military planes bombed the captured warship De Zeven Provincien, the punitive squadron of cruisers and destroyers steamed back to port today, victorious in the bloodiest naval clash in peacetime annals.

The De Zeven Provincien was bombed when the mutineers refused to surrender promptly after receiving an ultimatum from Captain Van Duin, commander of the punitive squadron.

The punitive squadron encountered the De Zeven at the entrance to Sunda Strait, which divides Sumatra from Java. When the mutineers refused to surrender, Captain Van Duin ordered seaplanes to drop one bomb on the ship.

The aerial bombers scored a direct hit. The projectile landed on the bridge, killing eighteen mutineers, including three European marines and one petty officer, immediately and wounding 25 others.

Nine of the injured were reported in a serious condition.

The remaining mutineers capitulated completely after the bombing, running up white flags and falling over one another to leave the ship. They scrambled into lifeboats and rowed to the destroyers and cruisers comprising the punitive squadron.

REVOLT BEGINS AGAINST WHITE

Insurgent Democratic Senators Seek To Form Sales Tax Bloc.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 10.—Breaking into open revolt against Governor George White, Democratic insurgents of the state senate today opened a formal fight for a $40,000,000 state sales tax and warned that a sales tax bloc will be formed in the Ohio legislature next week.

Senators Harold G. Mosier (D), of Cleveland, and William H. Herner (D), of Norwalk, assumed leadership of the sales tax campaign and today invited the general assembly to scrap the governor's nuisance taxes and give approval to their program.

The opening of the sales tax drive, which has heretofore been unorganized and leaderless, was signaled by an attack by Senator Mosier on Governor White's proposed tax on mail, amusements, soft drinks and cigars.

"It is plain," declared Mosier, "that a scattered and selected portion of the people have been chosen to carry the entire burden without regard to their ability to pay, and without regard to the dictates of justice and fairness."

CANNED SALMON AND OTHER CANNED FISH

Canned salmon is one of the low-priced articles on the grocer's shelves in winter. Sardines, kippered herring, and canned herring are also cheap. These particular fish products mean more than mere items for low-cost meals, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. They have unusual value in the diet.

Canned salmon is a product of the salmon fisheries of the Pacific Coast. Millions of pounds are canned each year and shipped all over the world. There are five kinds of Pacific salmon, however, and though they are closely related species of fish, they usually sell at different prices. The king salmon, or Shumook, or spring salmon as it is called in different regions of the coast, is a higher-priced fish than any of the others as a rule. Next comes the sockeye or red salmon. The humpback or pink, the silver or coho, and the keta or chum are the cheaper grades, all widely used. The Pacific salmon are very oily fish and the oil is rich in two of the vitamins—the fat-soluble vitamins A and D. The deeper colored fish are richer than the others, which means that of the four cheaper salmon, the red and the humpback or pink are likely to be the better sources of these vitamins. Vitamin A is important in human food because it helps to prevent infections of eyes, nose, throat and the digestive tract. Vitamin D is the factor that prevents rickets in children, provide they have plenty of milk, also, to furnish calcium and phosphorus. All foods rich in vitamin D are especially useful in winter, for when the days are short and the sun's rays weak, we get very little of vitamin D from the other great source—the sunlight.

Canned salmon has another important value besides its vitamins A and D. It contains the factor that will prevent pellagra, a disease prevalent in sections of this county where the diet consists chiefly of corn meal, fat meat, and molasses. Scientists who studied this disease found that by the addition of canned salmon to this diet they could either prevent pellagra or cure it where it occurred.

Sardines are young herrings, which are also very oily fish. They are rich in vitamin D, as are the larger herrings also. Canned fish is a labor-saving food, for it can be served from the can, if so desired. It has all the important food values of meat, with special vitamin values besides. It is convenient, as well as appetizing, in school lunches, or other lunches, or in salads. There are innumerable other ways to serve canned salmon. It is used in combinations with other foods. It may be creamed or scalloped. Salmon loaf, salmon chowder, salmon patties or croquettes, are favorites. Kipperd herring scalloped with macaroni, makes a most appetizing dish, and a cheaper one. Herring roe, if mixed with rice, potatoes and fried in patties, is excellent food at low cost.

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter:

"After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat cheese and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. Ed. Forsythe, Box 219, Youngstown, N. Y.

"Science says ALL-BRAN provides 'bulk' to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron."

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetable. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Attempts Comeback

DENVER—Eddie Carter, once a popular organist and concert pianist on Broadway, recently was discovered on Denver's streets attempting to make a "comeback" after serving a prison term for check forgery. The pianist will be remembered for his compositions "Who's Sorry Now," and "Brown Eyes, Why Are You Blue."

SYNOPSIS
Priscilla, lovely young daughter of the late Sir John Harradine, Captain-General of the Leeward Isles, leaves the West Indies aboard the "Centaur" bound for England. She is accompanied by the pompous, middle-aged Major Sands, her father's aide, who seeks to win her hand and fortune. The time is 1690; the scene, the Spanish Main. Although his chances for succeeding Sir John as Captain-General were negligible, the Major leads Priscilla to believe he gave up the opportunity in order to be with her. She, however, considers him one of the family. At Barbados, Monsieur Charles de Bernis, distinguished looking Frenchman, comes aboard. Fearing pirates, Captain Bransome of the "Centaur" refuses to take de Bernis to Guadeloupe, but offers to let him off at Sainte Croix. Priscilla, attracted by de Bernis, resents the Major's hostility towards the Frenchman. When Captain Bransome stops at Roseau, Priscilla, Major Sands and de Bernis go ashore. The major's belief that de Bernis is an adventurer is strengthened when a burly, ill-kempt Frenchman, reeking of rum and tobacco, greets de Bernis in an impudently familiar tone.

CHAPTER FIVE
"A queer encounter for our fine gentleman. Most queer. Like the quality of his friends. More than ever I wonder who the devil he may be."
But Miss Priscilla was impatient of his wonder and his amusement. She found him petty. She knew the islands better, it seemed, than did he. She knew that colonial life could impose the oddest associations on a man, and that only the rash or the ignorant would draw conclusions from them.
She said something of the kind. "Odds life, ma'am! D'ye defend him?"
"I've not perceived him to be attacked, unless you mean to attack him, Bart. After all, Monsieur de Bernis has never pretended that he comes to us from Versailles."
"That will be because he doubts if it would carry conviction. Pish, child! The fellow's an adventurer."
Her agreement shocked and dismayed him more than contradiction could have done.
"So I had supposed," she smiled distractedly. "I love adventurers and the adventures."
Only the fact that de Bernis came striding to overtake them saved her from a homily. But her answer, which the Major accounted flippant, rankled with him; and it may have been due to this that after supper that night, when they were all assembled in the great cabin, he alluded to the matter of that meeting.
"That was a queer chance, Monsieur de Bernis, your coming face to face with an acquaintance here on Dominica."
"A queer chance, indeed," the Frenchman agreed readily. "That was an old brother-in-arms."
The Major's sandy brows went up. "Ye've been a soldier, sir?"
"There was an odd light in the Frenchman's eyes as for a long moment they considered his question. He seemed faintly amused. "Oh, after a fashion," he said at last. Then he swung to Bransome, who sat at his ease now, in cotton shirt and calico drawers, the European finery discarded. "It was La-farache, Captain. He tells me that he is trading with you." And he went on. "We were on Santa Catalina together under the Sisur Simon, and amongst the very few who survived the Spanish raid there of Perez de Guzman. La-farache and I and two others, who had hidden ourselves in a maize field, when all was lost, got away that night in an open boat, and contrived to reach the Main I was wounded, and my left arm had been broken by a piece of langrel during the bombardment. But all evils do not come to hurt us, as the Italians say. It saved my life. For it was my uselessness drove me into hiding, where the other three afterwards joined me. They were the first wounds I took. I was under twenty at the time. Only my youth and my vigor saved my arm and my life in the trials and hardships that followed. So far as I know we were the only four who escaped alive of the hundred and twenty men who were on Santa Catalina with Simon. When Perez took the island, he ruthlessly avenged the defence it had made by putting to the sword every man who had remained alive. A vile massacre. A vantage cruelty."
He fell pensive, and might have left the matter there but that Miss Priscilla broke the ensuing silence to press him for more details.
In yielding, he told her of the colony which Mansvelt had established on Santa Catalina, of how they had gone to work to cultivate the land, planting maize and plantains, sweet potatoes, cassava, and tobacco. Whilst she listened to him with parted lips and softened eyes, he drew a picture of the flourishing condition which had been reached by the plantations when Don Juan Perez de Guzman came over from Panama, with four ships and an overwhelming force, to wreak his mischief. He told of Simon's proud answer when summoned to surrender that he held the settlement for the English Crown, and that sooner than yield it up, he and those with him would yield up their lives. He stirred their blood by the picture he drew of the gallant stand made by that little garrison against the overwhelming Spanish odds. And he moved them to compassion by the tale of the massacre that followed and the wanton destruction of the plantations so laboriously hoed.

He sang some little songs of his native Provence that left Priscilla with stinging eyes and an ache at the heart.

When he reached the end, there was a smile at once grim and wistful on his lean, grey-tinted face. The deep lines in it, lines far deeper than were warranted by his years, became more marked.
"The Spaniards paid for it at Porto Bello and at Panama and elsewhere. How they paid! But not all the Spanish blood that has since been shed could avenge the brutal, cowardly destruction of the English and the French who were in alliance at Santa Catalina."
He had impressed himself upon them by that glimpse into his past and into the history of West Indian settlements. Even the Major, who ever he might struggle against it, found himself caught in the spell of this queer fellow's personality.
Later, when supper was done, and the table had been cleared, Monsieur de Bernis went to fetch a guitar from among the effects in his cabin. Seated on the stern window, with his back to the great window that stood open to the purple tropical night, he sang some little songs of his native Provence and one or two queerly moving Spanish airs set in the minor key.
Rendered by his mellow baritone voice they had power to leave Miss Priscilla with stinging eyes and an ache at the heart; and even Major Sands was moved to admit that Monsieur de Bernis had a prodigious fine gift of song. But he took care to make the admission with patronage, as if to mark the gulf that lay between himself and his charge on the one hand and this stranger, met by chance, on the other. He accounted it a necessary precaution, because he could not be blind to the impression the fellow was making upon Miss Priscilla's inexperience. It was also, no doubt, because of this that on the morrow the Major permitted himself a sneer at Monsieur de Bernis' expense. It went near to making a breach between himself and the lady in his charge.

Six-Year Term

Early ratification of the twentieth or lame-duck amendment to the constitution has given the whole camp of constitution tinkers new hope. Approval by the thirty-sixth state legislature was the cue for reviving innumerable amendment movements, some of which had long been thought dead.
Among the revivals is the proposal to change the presidential term to six years. The theory is that a new president spends his first two years formulating his policies and the next two years working for reelection. Six years, it is argued, would give him a chance to work out his policies. The fatal defect in this scheme is that six years is too long to keep in office a chief executive who early in his term loses the confidence of the people. If there were some easy way of removing him before the expiration of his term this would not be such a serious objection.
Moreover, the argument that presidents spend two years of their first term learning the ropes and the next two playing national politics has no basis in fact. President Hoover inherited most of his policies from the Coolidge administration and formulae the other prior to inauguration or as emergencies arose. President-elect Roosevelt is even now preparing to submit his policies to the new Congress at a special session shortly after inauguration.
Four years may not always give sufficient time for presidential policies to demonstrate their efficacy, but if a chief executive cannot find his stride in that time two more years will not help him.

Paradoxically, when more big saws are idle employment will be increasing.

Debt Relief

BACK of the many measures before national and state legislative bodies to ease the burden of the debtor, to liberalize the bankruptcy laws, to facilitate corporation reorganization so receiverships can be avoided and to refinance farm and home mortgages is the fact that the country is trying to pay interest on debts incurred at pre-depression prices.
The farmers owe $1,150,000,000 less than they owed in 1922 but those who purchased farms while farm values were inflated due to war prices have obligations based on $2 wheat and 25-cent wheat incomes with which to meet them. Farm mortgages doubled between 1915 and 1920.
Home owners are under a mortgage of $25,000,000,000, placed upon them when real estate prices and wages were high. They struggled with the interest payments when wages were highest, and now that the average income hardly justifies a total mortgage indebtedness of half the present amount hundreds of thousands of mortgagors are in default. Corporations increased their indebtedness from $43,000,000,000 to $75,000,000,000 from 1922 to 1929 and of the few doing business in volume today still fewer are operating at a profit.
Obviously the situation is acute. It cannot take care of itself without virtually destroying all values and bringing chaos into the whole financial and business structure. So it is proposed to inflate the currency to boost prices and wages, to refinance loans at lower interest rates, to declare a moratorium on all debts, to lend borrowers money with which to pay their interest and so on. Every plan is experimental with results problematical.
The opinion seems to be spreading that the war wasn't even a success for the losers.
Senators, it appears, resent the statement by the chief sergeant-at-arms that only a few congressmen are crooks.
If wheat would continue its recent rise of 1-2 cents in one day for one month, the new administration's problems would be solved.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND
The biggest and best show given Circleville theater goes in many months was the musical "The Brevities of 1933" at the Grand Opera house last night.
The company comprises twenty people including an orchestra consisting of five pieces that added much to the program. Tiny Speck, billed as the Kate Smith of the theater was very good and her numbers were very well received by the audience.
The Manhattan trio of adagio dancers were as fine as seen on any stage. Paul Falcony baritone rendered "On the Road to Mandalay" in a most pleasing manner.
While "Meen Round" Cole does some very good and fast dances besides supplying some real laughter.
To sum the show up as a whole it was more than pleasing in every way and was thoroughly enjoyed all.
Opening today with a complete change of program both on the stage and screen. With all new songs dances and plenty of new laughs provided by the Brevities of 1933.

Violent hand-to-hand encounters and daring riding reveal Tom Keene's amazing strength, agility and dash in a stirring, six-shooting action film. "The Cheyenne Kid" coming to the Cliftona Theatre Saturday.
"The Cheyenne Kid" offers Tom Keene with his usual hazardous exploits, skilfully enacted, in an original outdoor Western tale. Action and romance are provided in the story, adapted from "C. Tuttle's novel, 'Sir Pagan Pass'."
Tom Keene, a daring bronco-buster loses his horse pursuing a dishonest gambler. He trudges across the prairie and encounters a bandit who engages him in a violent melee. Keene emerges victorious, securing his opponent's horse and gun, and rides into a neighboring town. The townsfolk note that his horse fits that of the bandit as shown on a reward poster. He is threatened with exposure by an unscrupulous gold miner unless he murders his sweetheart's father, who owns a gold mine. How he faces this dilemma provides the suspense in "The Cheyenne Kid."
AT THE CLIFTONA
Sincerely is the keynote of Smilin' Ed McConnell's road program. He will not break faith with his former friends and others who have helped him to become a star. Unlike the showman who tries to sell inferior merchandise to a customer, Ed is on the square with his listeners.
He investigates thoroughly any article of merchandise he is asked to advertise during his broadcast and if he himself is not convinced of its good merits, he refuses the program. He has built up a reputation for his good faith with his radio friends, particularly among the farmers, and no amount of money will he accept to break that faith and jeopardize his standing with them. He is conscientious to a fault and absolutely honest with his public.
There is another reason Smilin' Ed doesn't require advance preparation and censorship. The directors of broadcasting stations and the advertising sponsors also have implicit faith in Ed's sincerity and they know whatever he says will be honest, truthful and creditable in so far as he is able, and the verdict invariably is, "Give Smilin' Ed McConnell free rein - he's sure one swell guy."
Smilin' Ed appears here in person Saturday, Feb. 11th at 2 to 10 p. m. at the Cliftona.

Treat Nose And Throat Infections
Neglecting Catarrhal Condition May Lead to Other Ills

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

CATARRH of the nose and throat is common in all seasons and climates. The symptoms of catarrh follow an irritation, inflammation or infection of the lining membrane of the nose or throat. It is ordinarily spoken of by the physician as acute or chronic rhinitis. The germs which cause colds and sore throats also cause rhinitis. The sufferer complains of stiffness in the nose and dryness in the throat. This is followed by a "running nose" mucus dropping in the throat, difficulty in clearing the nose and throat, and sore throat. Hoarseness may be present.

Common Symptoms
These symptoms may persist from a few hours to a few days. In some cases they last for three or four days. The complications are due to the germs responsible for the original infection. They become lodged in the mucous membranes, particularly in the nasal sinuses which open into the nose. Sinusitis is this inflammation is called is often a stubborn and difficult ailment to cure.

Chronic nasal catarrh or chronic rhinitis is the continuation of acute catarrh. It is more difficult to cure, persisting for a long time. It is usually associated with some degree of infection of the sinuses. The throat is dry, painful and difficult to clear. The glands of the neck may become enlarged particularly in children. Neglected rhinitis may lead to other serious disturbances besides sinus disease. Rheumatism, neuritis, heart disease, intestinal and nervous diseases, may be traced to catarrh of the nose and throat. Never neglect this trouble.

Examination Helpful
If it persists a careful examination of the nose, throat and sinuses is necessary. A crooked nasal septum, enlargement of the bones of the nose or other deformities of nasal structures, should be corrected whenever possible. When there is a failure to promote drainage, serious infections of the nose and sinuses may be more apt to occur.

If you are susceptible to nasal infections, avoid congested meeting places so far as is reasonably possible. Proper heating and ventilation of the home are essential. Avoid sudden changes in temperature, chilling and exposure to cold and dampness. Include in your diet a liberal supply of fresh fruits, vegetables, cereals, cream, milk, butter and eggs. These foods contain certain valuable substances which aid the body to combat germs of the common cold, and nasal catarrh.

SCIOTO-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

The Juniors have decided on Friday March 3, as the date for the presentation of their play, "Bashful Mr. Bobbs."

Mrs. Treat Keller and Miss Catherine Keller entertained with a jig saw puzzle party for the pleasure of Miss Alice Keller, Miss Mable Joseph, and Mrs. Ethel Fortune, Thursday evening, February 2 at the home of Mrs. Treat Keller. The party was in celebration of the three honored guests' birthdays. The following guests were present: Misses Dorothy Sexauer, Doris Hott, Elizabeth Dennis, Ruby Miller, Clarabell Poole, Dorothy Beckett, Margaret Glick, Elizabeth Winfough, Evelyn Winfough, Inez Fausnaugh, Louise Williams, Gail Davis, Evelyn Walker, Evelyn Neff, and Mrs. Neal.

Last Tuesday we were well entertained by the Junior Class chapel program. Marvane Birkhead, Chester Dountz, Beulah Reed, Alfred Beavers, Ray Messmore, and Floyd Younk sang several numbers, among which was their class song. A radio number was given by Roy Messmore and Alfred Beavers which was enjoyed by everyone. Roy played the harmonica and Alfred, the guitar. A play entitled, "The First Day of School," was given and portrayed very humorously the difficulties of a first grade teacher. All the members of the class took part in this program.

At the Pickaway County Teachers' Meeting which was held Saturday 2nd Scioto Township teachers took part in the program. Miss Dorothy Sexauer was one of the leaders in the primary group while Mrs. Neal gave a short talk on whether Home Economics should be elective or compulsory in the high school curriculum.

The automobile contest in spelling in the fifth grade ends this week. The winner is either Gardner Beatty or Doris Hill.

The pupils of grade 5 are working out projects on Lincoln and Washington. They are also studying the flag and making books on it.

Those in the fifth grade who were not absent last week: Gardner Beatty, Warren Beers, Virgil Devors, Paul Green, Catharine Hettinger, Doris Hill, Virginia Hill, Erma Morrison, Jean Neal, Audrey Neal, Twila Sheets, Bula Jean Strobel, Marjorie Tomlinson, Elizabeth Whitson, Lyle Wilkins, and Maxine Schilling.

The seventh grade mathematics class made some very interesting and instructive charts on constructed designs. The boys and girls of the class have started a contest with the aim of each one improving his own work. The boys chose Earl Wilson as their captain and the girls chose Audrey Johnson.

The eighth grade graphs have been judged and the best line graph was handed in by Betty Neal, bar graph by Faye McKnight, pictograph by Malcolm Williams. Others running a close second in the contest were Emerson Sheets, Raymond Hott and Twila Sproule.

SCIOTO GIRLS DOWN JACKSON

The Scioto High School girls basketball team displayed their normal power last Friday night when they defeated a strong Jackson team at the Jackson High gymnasium. For the past few weeks Scioto has been in a slump, but last Friday night they showed an attack that is going to make the County leaders look to their laurels. The guards on the Scioto team held Jackson's fast breaking offense to three points in the first half while their own forwards totaled nine, which was nothing for them to be proud of considering the number of scoring opportunities they failed to materialize.

In the second half a change in the Jackson lineup added new spirit to their team and it looked for a while as if they might even up the score. Scioto's lead was too much for them and even though they played sterling basketball and put up a fight that is dear to any fan's heart they could not quite make the grade. The final score was 13-9.

The Jackson boys were out for blood and they got it. They seemed to want revenge for the defeat that was handed their girls and they consistently outplayed and outscored the lads from Scioto.

Jackson used their fast breaking pivot play to perfection and with their sizes and speed had little trouble scoring at will. Scioto did not seem to be able to locate the hoop, for time after time they would shoot and the ball would drop through for the score. The final score was 33-13.

WESTPOINT, Conn., Feb. 10.—Seven coast guard boats and three airplanes today renewed a search for the auxiliary schooner "Saugatuck," with Captain John Mulhaly and ten other persons aboard.

The craft has not been seen since 10 p. m. Wednesday when Mulhaly, with a crew of hastily recruited volunteers and police set off in search of Edward Connolly, 17, missing in a rowboat. Connolly was found last night, when he came upon a searching party looking for him on Cockenoe island. He had spent Wednesday night at Peck's Ledge Lighthouse.

Adding to the drama of the search for the searching was the fact that Mrs. Alexander Hauser, mother of the Connolly youth, had boarded the Saugatuck when it set out Wednesday, and is missing with it. Mulhaly's daughter, Betty, 18, was also aboard.

The MONTHS IN HISTORY

BY MRS. HOWARD JONES.

FEBRUARY
While the shortest month in the year, February is of much historical importance. According to our calendar it comes second, following January the first month. It was not originally in the Roman calendar until 452 B. C. It was then the last month of the year. Then it was placed where it now ranks.

The ancient name Februarius was derived from the verb februare to purify or from Februaria the Roman festival of general expiation and lustration, which was celebrated during the latter part of this month.

The fourteenth of the month has been for centuries celebrated in honor of St. Valentine. Three presidents of the United States were born during this month: George Washington, the first president of the Republic was born on the 22nd of the month, 1732.

William Henry Harrison, who was in office only one short month, was born on the ninth day of February, 1773.

Abraham Lincoln, our first martyred president, was born on Feb. 12, 1809.

MONTH OF EXPLOSION
On Feb. 15, 1898, the battleship, "Maine," stationed in Havana harbor was destroyed by explosion and many lives lost thus precipitating a war with Spain and liberating Cuba from her dominion. Many of us remember the exciting slogan "Remember the Maine" which we still occasionally hear.

The month has one peculiarity which distinguishes it from the other eleven which form our year. For three years it has only 28 days then in order to stabilize our calendar on February falls an extra day every four years giving her 29 days. This fourth year is called leap year.

During leap year custom is reversed, the girls may do the courting, bachelors all take to the woods and remain under cover until the new year.

We nearly forgot Ground Hog day, the second day of February, so the story runs, the old ground hog rouses from his winter nap and sallies forth to view the weather. If he sees his shadow he goes back to his burrow and there will be six weeks more of winter, otherwise if he does not
